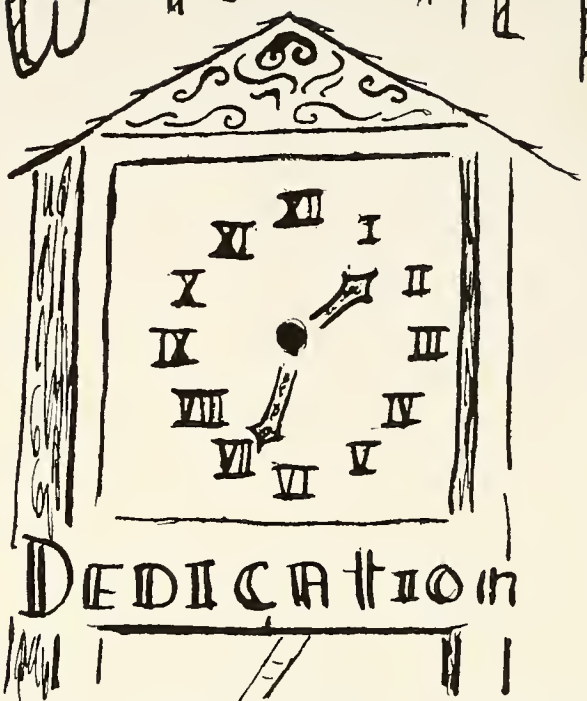
"NOW IS THE HOUR"



DEDICATION

The annual staff of 1957 dedicate this annual to the faculty who played an important role in making this an effective and memorable hour.

Contents

Hour of Leadership — Administration
Hour of Climax — Seniors
Hours of Waiting — Underclassmen
Hours of Approach — Grades
Hours of Action — Sports + Activities
Hours of Fun — Snapshots

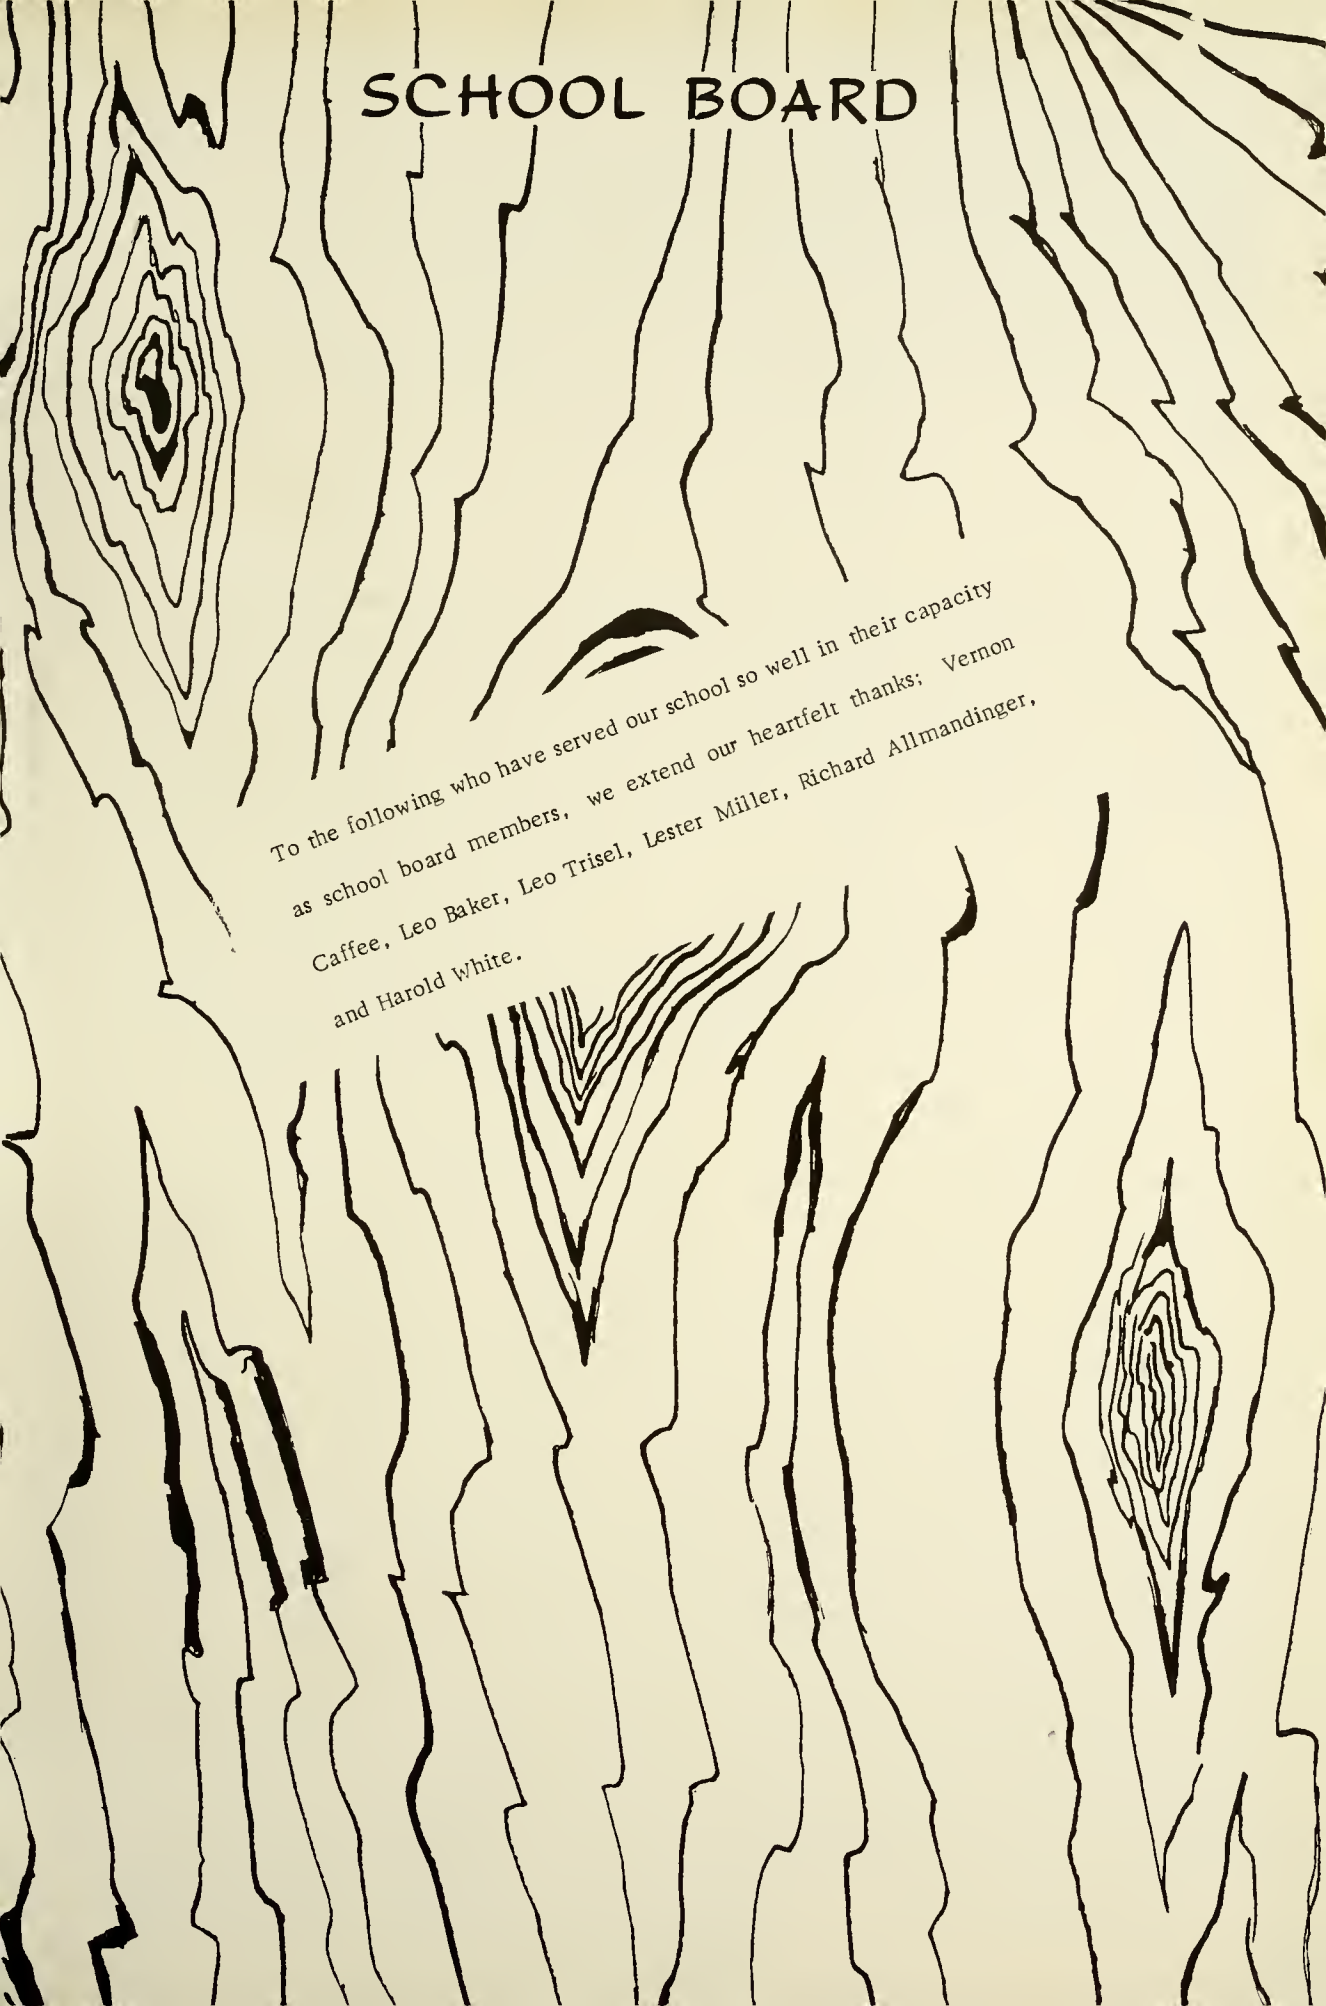
ADMINISTRATION

Robert W. Games has successfully completed his first year at Willshire as the head administrator. Known for his progressive, yet discreet views on modern teaching techniques, Mr. Games is largely responsible for the excellent reputation that Willshire enjoys today.

CHARLES B. HALL, Principal
Commercial Subjects

MRS. LOUISE BUECHNER
School Secretary

SCHOOL BOARD



To the following who have served our school so well in their capacity as school board members, we extend our heartfelt thanks; Vernon Caffee, Leo Baker, Leo Trisel, Lester Miller, Richard Allmandinger, and Harold White.

used to See Baseball Changes

Ambler and Ace Parker, infielders, among many. But he soon learned that you couldn't develop collegians on a major league team. They had to be farmed out to the minors for seasoning. The A's had no farms.

In short, Mack fell behind the times. Perhaps it was because he was getting old.

Whatever the reason, it happened. The A's became strictly second division material. Finally, because of necessity and not a change of heart, the A's went in for the farm system. They tied up a few minor league teams with working agreements and bought some outright.

It was 1947 before the farms began to help. The A's were able to draw pitchers like Phil Marchildon, Dick Fowler, Bill McCahan, Joe Coleman and others from their Toronto affiliate.

A fiery first baseman named Ferris Fain was picked up via the draft system from San Francisco. Eddie Joost, a shortstop whose temper cost him a National League job, was bought for a song. The A's finished fifth. And in 1948, for the first time in 15 years, the Macks made the first division—fourth.

Connie Mack was then 86 years old and he was beginning to slip somewhat as a baseball strategist. But he wouldn't quit. He had two goals, (1) to win one more pennant, and (2) to complete 50 years as manager of the Athletics. He wrapped his hopes in the 1950 team, his 50th edition. He felt that this was the year for one more pennant.

But the A's wound up a miserable eighth, winning 52 games and losing 102.

At the age of 88, this living symbol of the game of baseball stepped down as manager. At the end, he turned the managing over to one of his prize pupils, James Joseph Dykes. And in the front office, the Mack sons, Connie Jr., Earle and Roy had taken over.

However, the family effort at rejuvenating the team failed, partly because of internal bickering among the brothers and partly because the team on the field just didn't have the stuff.

Roy and Earle came up with the money to buy out Connie Jr., by taking a $1,800,000 mortgage on the team from an insurance company. Connie Jr., retired to operating a fleet of shrimp boats in Florida.

Roy battled to keep the name of Mack in baseball and the team in Philadelphia. Severl efforts failed and it looked as if the A's were headed for Kansas City. But at almost the zero-hour eight Philadelphia business men stepped in and invested enough money to buy out Connie and Earle.

Roy also is a member of the syndicate with one-ninth interest but the lure of the Macks has passed. Only memories and Connie Mack stadium, originally Shibe Park, remain to recall the feats of the teams under the direction of the "grand old man."
